Solar Observations for the Meridian.--Burt's solar compass was first used for determining the meridian in surveying, then several solar attachments were invented using the same principle. The advantage in using a solar attachment lies in the fact that it mechanically solves the SZP triangle. Fig. 5, and places the telescope in the meridian at the end of the observation. The disadvantage present in most of them is that the observation cannot be so made as to eliminate the errors of adjustment in either the transit or attachment. With all of them it is necessary to calculate the declination and correct it for refraction before the observation. The direct...

Reviews

Just no phrases to describe. It typically does not price an excessive amount of. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
