Not illustrated. 1910 Excerpt: .the Stallion Registration Board office one would assume that standing a stallion or jack in some communities was a profitable enterprise, while in others it was anything but profitable. The following two letters probably represent both extremes: (1) I done more business through the dull seasons than I am doing now. The reason is this, every cheap man with a cheap stallion is out peddling from house to house and cutting prices. I know of a man that has lost the-use of his mare for three years from using counterfeit stallions. If a counterfeit stallion didn t come around, they would go to one. I have been in the business for some time, but it gets worse every year. (2) I traded for another horse June 25th, and I put him on the road June 26th and bred 56 mares and could have bred 100 mares if I had owned him when the breeding season started. I talked with a man--who had five stallions on the road last summer and he told me that the horse business never looked better to him than right now, and I think my horse will have all he can do this coming season. Times and methods are changing in all lines of business and the stallion owner must realize this and meet the changing conditions if he wants to make a success of standing a public-service stallion or jack. Elsewhere in this bulletin is an article by W. H. Peters,...
